The title should be in a central position with capital letters.

Abstract

The abstract should be placed under the title with bold letters, size 10, single spaced, up to 250 words. This also applies to key-words (up to 5). If the paper is written in one of the Slavic languages or in English, then the abstract should be written in Macedonian. For example:

TITLE

Abstract: Во оваа статија е направена анализа на особеностите на глаголите од семантичкото поле за визуелна перцепција во македонскиот јазик. Посебен акцент е ставен на синтаксичката шема на секој од овие глаголи со осврт на нијансите на значења што секој одделен глагол ги носи. Притоа се анализирали и одделните парови во однос на категоријата аспект во македонскиот јазик со поткрепа на нивната употреба во контексти собрани од електронски списанија.

Keywords: македонистика, синтакса, валенција на глаголот.

Referencing

When quoting, paraphrasing or referring to an author / text, the source should be indicated in the text, not in the footnotes below. The author's surname and year of publication should be given in brackets, e.g. (Koneski 1999). When necessary, provide a more detailed reference with a page number, e.g. (Koneski 1999: 33).

List of References and sources

A list of References must be given at the end of the paper for each cited (or paraphrased) work. First, provide the works in Cyrillic, and then in Roman alphabet, according to the alphabetical order of the authors. If there are more than one work by the same author, they must be given in a chronological order. If the same author has both authored and coauthored work, the former should be listed first. References should not be numbered.

Each bibliographic unit should include: the surname and the name of the author (s), year of publication, and the title of the paper. All references should provide the name of the publisher and the place of publication. For journal articles, it is obligatory to give the name of the journal, the year of publication, the number of the journal, and page numbers. The titles of the books and journals should be in italics, while the titles of the papers published in journals or edited volumes should be put in quotation marks. Dictionaries or other types of books written by several authors should be listed by the title and the number of the volume.
